Faculty Development Series: Practical Tools for Academic Career Advancement

The Office of Faculty Development created this series to help faculty achieve success in their academic career and to cover practical topics that will enhance career and professional development. Lectures will be videotaped and made available for viewing following the presentations on the faculty development intranet website. RSVP to denise.gallagher@cshs.org.

Self-Promotion: Crafting and Delivering Your Elevator Pitch

Participants will gain insight on ways to develop this important professional development tool. Come to learn about ways to effectively articulate your career successes, your research or your science in a concise pitch which may open the door to continuing conversations and opportunities.

Faculty Member Attends 2015 AAMC Early-Career Women Faculty Professional Development Seminar

Irene Kim, MD, Assistant Professor of Surgery and Comprehensive Transplant Center Transplant Surgeon was the fourth faculty member selected by the Office of Faculty Development to attend the AAMC Early-Career Women Faculty Professional Development Seminar. “The conference was not only helpful in providing practical feedback on my personal career goals, but it also galvanized my effort to further my research and academic pursuits. I cannot thank you enough for supporting my participation at this excellent conference, which I would highly recommend to other Cedars-Sinai junior faculty.”

AAMC Minority Faculty Development Seminars

The AAMC has added a new opportunity for mid-career minority faculty, the Mid-Career Minority Faculty Seminar, in addition to the existing Minority Faculty Development Seminar for early career faculty. With support from Dr. Melmed, the Office of Faculty Development is pleased to have selected two faculty members to attend one of each seminar in September: Kurlen Payton, MD, Pediatrics (Minority Faculty Development Seminar) and Christopher Harris, MD, Pediatrics (Mid-Career Minority Faculty Development Seminar).
